DEPARTING FROM A CANADIAN AIRPORT?
COVID-19 MEASURES IN EFFECT

No traveller who is symptomatic of COVID-19 will be allowed to fly.

Are you ready to board?

To board a flight within Canada, if you're 12 years and 4 months of age or older, you must:

- Be fully vaccinated with a Government of Canada accepted vaccine;

- Be ready at any point in your travel journey to show your official proof of vaccination. Failure to provide proof of vaccination could result in penalties or fines;

- Have received your second dose at least 14 full days prior to the day you travel;

- Have no signs or symptoms of COVID-19;

- Wear a mask throughout your entire travel journey, except for brief periods while eating, drinking or taking oral medication.

Important: If you qualify as fully vaccinated or are under 12 years and 4 months of age, a COVID-19 test is not needed to board a flight unless you're flying to a country that requires it.

Providing Proof of Vaccination

The Canadian COVID-19 proof of vaccination is a reliable way for Canadians to show their COVID-19 vaccination history when travelling. If you don't have Canadian proof, your proof of vaccination must include the following information:

- Full name of the person who received the vaccine;

- Name of the government or organization who issued the proof or administered the vaccine;

- Brand name or manufacturer of the vaccine or of the mix of accepted vaccines; and

- Date you received your second dose, or your first dose of Janssen/Johnson & Johnson.

If your proof of vaccination is not in English or French, you need a certified translation in English or French. Your certified translation must include the stamp or membership number of a professional translation association.

Foreign Nationals Departing Canada

Until August 31, 2022, unvaccinated foreign nationals who were allowed to enter Canada can board a flight departing Canada provided they show proof of a valid COVID-19 test result at the time of travel.

Presenting questionable or fraudulent documents could result in fines of up to $5,000 under the Aeronautics Act. The traveller will also be denied boarding.
