ATAC's Canadian Aviation Conference and Tradeshow 2021 Crowned a Success

Ottawa, November 25, 2021. ATAC held a highly successful 87th Annual Conference and Tradeshow in Montreal.

Fully compliant with strict provincial health measures, some 300 key Canadian commercial aviation stakeholders gathered at the Fairmont Queen Elizabeth in Montreal from November 16 to 18. The Conference and Tradeshow attracted over 40 exhibitors and included keynote speakers from NAV CANADA, Transport Canada, the Transportation Safety Board of Canada, and the Canadian Transportation Agency. Highly respected subject matter experts on various aspects of flight operations, aircraft maintenance, flight training, maintenance training, legal, security, and dangerous goods added to the success of this most important event in Canadian aviation.

Despite health measures limiting the number of exhibitors and participants allowed to attend the conference, the atmosphere was upbeat and committee and plenary work was highly productive. Happy to finally be able to participate in person in a major aviation industry activity, delegates were conscientious and respectful of the many safety health measures ATAC had to impose in order to hold the conference.

Special thanks to our Sponsors and Exhibitors as their participation was key to our success.

The ATAC Annual Meeting was held on Wednesday, November 17. ATAC Members elected six new Directors, namely Christian Busch of Air Inuit, Bill McGoey of Morningstar Air Express, John Green of North Cariboo Air, Derek Nice of Rise Air, Sherry Cooper of Sky Wings Aviation Academy and Steve Bogie of Drone Delivery Canada. Four Directors were re-elected to the Board.

The 2021-2022 ATAC Board of Directors is to be chaired by Chris Avery of Canadian North. Access the complete list of the ATAC Board of Directors.

We look forward to seeing everyone next year in Vancouver!
